2. The 4-Pillar Holistic Scholarship Evaluation Matrix

A high GMAT score opens the scholarship door, but these 4 pillars determine who actually receives funding.

Evaluation Pillar	Weight in Merit Decision	What the Scholarship Committee Looks For	How To Maximize Your Odds
Academic Excellence & Test Score	35% – 40%	Score 20-30 points above school median; strong undergraduate GPA	Achieve a 705+ on Focus; complete HBS CORe if GPA is low
Professional Impact & Career Trajectory	25% – 30%	Rapid promotions, high managerial ownership, measurable revenue/P&L results	Quantify every resume bullet point (e.g. "Drove $4.2M cost savings")
Unique Diversity & Life Perspective	20% – 25%	First-generation graduate, unique industry, geographic or personal journey	Articulate distinct identity and how it enriches cohort discussions
Clear Post-MBA Vision & Giving Back	10% – 15%	Realistic short-term and long-term career goals; alumni involvement plan	Show exactly how the school's alumni network powers your 5-year vision

Remember: Schools use scholarships as yield-protection tools to entice top candidates who might choose competitor schools.

3. The Scholarship Negotiation Protocol (Leveraging Multiple Offers)

How to ethically and professionally request additional merit aid once admission offers arrive.

- Timing Matters: Initiate funding discussions in March/April after second-round decisions are released and waitlists move.
- Always Express Gratitude & Fit: State unequivocally that their school remains your top choice provided financial feasibility aligns.
- Provide Concrete Evidence: Respectfully disclose peer school offers (e.g. "School X offered $60,000; I would immediately commit to your program if funding could be matched").
- Highlight Post-Application Achievements: Share new promotions, published research, or elevated GMAT retake scores as justification.
